Family Autism Network at Chapman creates time for friendship

April 27, 2015 | Updated May 1, 2015 8:50 p.m.

By STAFF REPORT

A social get-together Sunday at Chapman University fostered social interaction for young adults and adults with autism.

Groups teaming to host the event were the Family Autism Network, the Chapman Ability Project and students and faculty from the Chapman College of Educational Studies' counseling, school psychology and communication sciences and disorders programs.

Other participating were Cal State Fullerton's Center for Autism and UC Irvine.

The Family Autism Network hosts such socials to provide a safe, entertaining and age-appropriate environment where volunteers facilitate social interaction with and between guests – who often struggle with social engagement and maintaining friendships.
